Once there was a furry grey toy called Ellie. She belonged to John.

One of her tusks was missing and the other was grubby from too much cuddling. Her tusk was missing because she had been chewed by their dog when he was a puppy. John would take his toy to school, to the park and to bed.

One morning on the way to school John took Ellie out to show her the diggers scooping soil on the building site. But Mum heard the school bell ringing so she hurried John and his brother Ben along the road towards the school gate. "Quickly! We're going to be late! (or,)" she cried.
